College Admission Tests

- ❖ SAT I (reasoning test) – College admission test published by College Board. The test is divided into reading, math, and writing sections. The average score is around a 1500.
- ❖ SAT II (subject test) – Achievement tests published by College Board. These tests are usually not used for admission purposes, only for placement. However, be sure to check individual college's requirements as some colleges recommend them for admission. There are 24 different subject tests available.
- ❖ ACT – College admission test published by American College Testing. The tests are divided into 4 sections – English, math, social studies, and science. The average score is 22.

Most 4-year colleges require you to take one or more of these tests for admission purposes. Community colleges typically do not require these tests – NRCC does not). It will be your responsibility to check college catalogs and homepages for the requirements of specific schools that are of interest to you. Please be aware that most colleges want testing to be completed by December of your senior year.
